BALANCED NEWS, FEARLESS VIEWS

HERE COMES THAT RAINY DAY AGAIN President Aquino inspects the Binondo flood control pumping station on Wednesday to improve its operations to mitigate flooding in Metro Manila. The President also urged the Metropolitan Manila Development Authority to seek alternative measures to unclog waste materials caught in the drainage system. The MMDA manages 51 pumping stations, 21 large pumping stations, 18 small pumping stations and 20 relief pumping stations.

'Helen' hits land, whips N. Luzon; 6 dead

By Inquirer Northern Luzon and DJ Yap

TROPICAL Storm "Helen" crossed Isabela province at dawn on Wednesday, dumping heavy rains and whipping strong winds that toppled trees, especially in the coastal villages facing the Pacific Ocean. At least six fatalities were reported.

The winds were strongest in Palanan town at 1 a.m. when Helen moved toward northern Cagayan. By midmorning, how-

VIP PRISONER Go comes and goes at Bilibid prison.

NBP execs say kidnap group thrives in prison

By Marlon Ramos

ANOTHER high-profile prisoner at the state penitentiary has given prison officials the slip.

Rolito Go, a convicted road rage killer, was reported missing from the New Bilibid Prison (NBP) in Muntinlupa City on Tuesday night. But his relatives claimed yesterday that he was kidnapped along with his nephew.

Three Inquirer sources supported the claim of Go's family, saying this was not the first time that a rich prisoner at the NBP or their relatives had fallen prey to a kidnap-for-ransom syndicate.

In a briefing for reporters, Justice Secretary Leila de Lima sounded unconvinced it was a kidnapping.

"Imagine, kidnapped right in the NBP. Only in the Philippines," De Lima said.

De Lima said Go was reported to have been last seen at the Ina ng Awa church at the prison compound where he was as-

Pro-RH solons seek 10 changes

By Leila B. Salaverria

AT THE BEHEST of President Aquino, proponents announced yesterday proposed 10 changes in the reproductive health (RH) bill to make it more acceptable, including deletion of any reference to family size and the classification of contraceptives as essential medicines.

The entire section of the consolidated bill which recommended an ideal family size to Filipinos was deleted. In deference to the wishes of the President, said Albay Rep. Edcel Lagman, who was to introduce the alternations at the start on Tuesday of the period of amend-

Urban poor: P-Noy OKd 'on-site, in-city' housing

By TJ Burgonio and Jerry E. Esplanada

WITH the government talking again of relocating 100,000 informal settlers in Metro Manila, the Urban Poor Associates (UPA) is asking: Whatever happened to the ambitious plan to provide on-site or in-city housing for them?

"The plan was on-site, in-city or near-city housing. The President agreed to that," UPA executive director Denis Murphy

Bill Gates commits $370M to invent toilet of future

SEATTLE, Washington—These aren't your typical toilets. One uses microwave energy to transform human waste into electricity. Another captures urine and uses it for flushing. And still another turns excrement into charcoal.

They are part of a Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation competition to reinvent the toilet for the 2.5 billion people around the world who don't have access to modern sanitation systems for handling the basic and vital need in disposing of bodily waste.

Scientists from around the world have taken up the challenge, and the foundation announced some projects on Tuesday that would be getting more money to take their ideas from the lab to the cities. There, local entrepreneurs

PNP rebuffs Ang-See on spate of Sino kidnappings

SEVEN Chinese nationals were kidnapped in separate incidents last month while on a tour outside Metro Manila.

This was revealed by anticrime crusader Teresita Ang-See, citing the most recent kidnapping case of four Chinese nationals allegedly snatched by uniformed policemen last Jan. 27.

A Filipino-Chinese businessman, who declined to be named, claimed that this rash of kidnappings had prompted China to issue a black travel advisory on the Philippines which could dry up the influx of Mainland tourists in the country.

Days of excess over; protest at MWSS

By Riza T. Olchondra

WEATHER forecaster Jori Loiz sometimes has no fare money because of his low salary, but a driver at the Metropolitan Waterworks and Sewerage System (MWSS) gets a monthly salary of nearly P100,000.

Until about 2009, a driver for the MWSS used to receive about P97,000 a month and he was not even working for a high-profile, multinational company but a government-owned and -controlled corporation (GOCC).

By Sept. 1 this year, with the removal of illegal allowances and bonuses, that same package would be trimmed to about P30,000 a month. But that will still be way above what drivers

LIGHTHOUSE STRUCTURE

The PCG will construct thirty three (33) new and modern lighthouse structures in different parts of the country. Once installed, the lighthouses will enhance the safety of navigation in the country, as these serve as additional guide and reference to fishing boats, domestic vessels and even international vessels transiting Philippine waters. This is in line with the commitment of Philippine Government to provide a Convenient, Affordable, Reliable, Efficient, and Safe maritime transport.

THE STRUCTURES

This project will bid out three (3) kinds of lighthouse structures: the 18-meter Concrete Lighthouse Structure; 12-meter Concrete Lighthouse Structure; and 10-meter Pole Beam Type Steel Tower, all with perimeter fence.

All structures must subscribe to these specifications:

- Concrete compressive strength must be at 3000 psi (20 Mpa), Class "A" mixture, 1:2:4 proportion.
- Reinforcing bars must be at yield strength of 33000 psi Fy = 230 Mpa for all concreting works.
- Aggregates must be ¾" coarse aggregate and washed. Sand must be clean, hard, coarse river sand conforming to ASTM C-33.
- Reinforcing bars shall be fixed by means of adequately tied steel wires to form rigid reinforcement cages or nets. The minimum concrete covering must be 40mm for the outer face of the reinforcement bars to face forms. Main reinforcement bars must be anchored by means of an end hook/bend. Splices must be 0.60 m minimum.
- Masonry/hollow masonry units shall be ordinary 6" concrete hollow blocks for exterior walls and 4" concrete hollow blocks for interior walls/plumb and align when installation is finished. Cement must be Portland 40Kgs, mixture proportion class "B". Masonry wall system must be plastered and finished smooth. Reinforcement must be grade 33.
- Truss members shall conform to ASTM A-36 steel shapes and sizes. Welding electrode shall be an E-7 electrode. All joints must be fully welded, cleaned and primed with anti-rust coatings for metal.
- All painting materials shall be known quality and of known brands with good quality and durability. One brand shall be used in the entire painting job.

A MESSAGE OF CONCERN

- A staggering 17.5% of youth (aged 13-15) have began to smoke including children as young as 5 years old.
- 30% of all girls between the ages of 13 to 15 now smoke regularly, despite knowing that smoking can cause cancer, infertility and even early menopause.
- Daily 515 to 827 Filipinos contract smoking-related lung cancers and lung and heart diseases.
- 7 out of 10 primary causes of mortality are tobacco-related diseases.
- Every hour 10 Filipinos die from illnesses caused by smoking.

SMOKING IS DANGEROUS TO ONE'S HEALTH.
SMOKING KILLS.

Let us keep cigarettes away from the youth and also from the poor. They are very vulnerable to deadly smoking-related diseases.

We support the government initiative to DRASTICALLY INCREASE TAXES on cigarettes and to use the additional revenues for health care programs and services.

This message of concern comes from doctors who are against smoking, former patients of smoking-related diseases,and former smokers who successfully kicked the habit.

Families survive by selling the 'Queen'

EDNA Resona sells pineapples for a living in Daet town in Camarines Norte.

By Jesus Cabiles Soltes
Daet, Camarines Norte

FOR EDNA Resona, a 48-year-old mother of three, the sweet, juicy Queen pineapple of Camarines Norte is more than just refreshment or dessert; it allows her to make both ends meet and send the children to school.

Every two days for the past five years, Resona has sold a total 300 pineapples of the Queen variety at a roadside open stall at the public market of Daet, the provincial capital. The place has been teeming with traders selling almost every kind of merchandise.

The people of Camarines Norte are wont to proclaim that the Queen is the sweetest in the world.

"I earn enough from it. I would have not carried on with this hard task of peeling pineapples if I were not getting anything from it," says Resona, a resident of Barangay V in Daet.

The woman has been the sole family breadwinner since her husband became ill more than a year ago.

In 2007, she started selling pineapples with a capital of just P300. Now, she is one of the biggest sellers in the public market.

"I had been selling small pineapples I bought from other sellers in the market until I got to know planters from San Lorenzo Ruiz who have been directly supplying pineapples of commercial quality," she says. Since then, her income has grown steadily.

Resona sells two pineapples for P25 and peeled pineapple for P15. She buys the fruits from suppliers for P7 each.

Peak season is in the summer months, when she would net P1,000 a day. During the rainy days, she would earn only P700 while the shelf life of pineapple would drop from one week.

CAMARINES Norte residents claim the Queen pineapples are the sweetest in the world.

Art of peeling

She saves at least P50 from her daily earnings for the rainy days or when the supply of pineapples runs out, especially during floods.

Resona has so mastered the art of peeling pineapples that she can even think of other things.

Peeling should start by slicing the fruit crosswise on top, near the stalk, so the extent of the "eyes" on the flesh of the fruit would be determined, she says. "That knowledge helps when it is time to remove the eyes by cutting a spiral gully around the pineapple," she says.

By selling pineapples, she says she can send her daughter to college next year until she earns a degree. She is determined to do the same for her two other children, who are in elementary school.

"Many of the pineapple sellers in Daet have sent their children to college. I will do the same. I will do everything," she says.

Enough supply

Resona and other pineapple sellers in Daet and in other towns have been given assurance by the government that they will have enough supply in the coming years.

According to the Department of Agriculture, Camarines Norte remains one of the top producers of pineapple in the country. In 2011, it produced 87,000 metric tons.

BPO firms give relief packages

LAGUNA'S thriving business process outsourcing (BPO) industry has donated P400,000 worth of relief packages to victims of last week's monsoon deluge in Biñan City in the province and in Quezon City.

The assistance came even as several call center agents cried foul when BPO companies refused to suspend their operations at the height of the heavy rains. The industry is among the top revenue-generating sectors in the country, contributing some $11 billion in 2011.

The Business Processing Association of the Philippines (BPAP), an umbrella of about 300 US, Australian and European firms with facilities in the Philippines, led the distribution of relief packages to 2,000 families in Barangays Dela Paz and Malaban in Biñan on Tuesday.

Last week, packages were given to 1,300 families in Barangay Tatalon, Quezon City.

P400,000 in donations

The nonprofit Children's Hour Inc. identified the two sites and facilitated the distribution, in coordination with the Philippine Army and the Technical Education and Skills Development Authority in Laguna.

Raymond Antonio Luchas, BPAP executive director, said the association had raised P400,000 in donations from several members. "We sent out letters to the companies' country managers and their second liners who mobilized [the collection of funds]," he said.

The companies have devised their own donation schemes, either by soliciting directly from their employees or allocating calamity funds.

Luchas said that although the total damage of the recent disaster to the BPO sector had yet to be measured, some contact center facilities in Quezon City were among the places flooded. Marissa Cinco

Sickness won't stop her from doing relief work

By Marissa Cinco

JOCELYN Hernandez was driving home to Bacoor City in Cavite when she heard the news from the radio about the huge losses brought by the monsoon floods to thousands of families in Luzon. Instantly, kindness kicked in as she made mental notes of how to raise donations for the victims.

The 46-year-old migrant worker had just been to the hospital. Just recently, doctors found her blood platelet count dropping and had diagnosed abnormality in one of her kidneys—symptoms that if untreated may lead to lupus.

Lupus is a disorder of the immune system in which there is an attack against healthy cells and tissues of the body. "It is a tricky disease that can damage the joints, skin, blood vessels and vital organs," Hernandez, 46, said.

PEOPLE

Hernandez is based in Hong Kong. She began working as a singer in a hotel in 1988 and met a Filipino engineer whom she later married. In 2004, she moved to her present job as a clerk in a lending company that offered loans to overseas Filipino workers (OFWs).

She regularly goes home to visit her mother in Bacoor City in Cavite. She had thought of skipping the trip this year; her family would anyway settle down in the Philippines next year when her daughter enrolls in college.

"This visit was actually unplanned," Hernandez said. The only reason she and her husband came home in July was to seek a second opinion after doctors in Hong Kong advised her to get a bone marrow transplant.

It started months ago when she had "this pain in the back and legs that made me feel like I have flu all the time." At first, she thought it was a simple arthritis, but the fact that two of her siblings had died of cancer drove her to seek medical attention.

In the Philippines, "my hematologist found one of my kidneys shrinking. And my platelet count was plummeting, like if the normal count is 140, mine is just 45," she said.

Donations

Interviewed on the phone the night before her flight back to Hong Kong on Sunday, Hernandez didn't sound a bit depressed but rather thrilled about how she ended her visit home.

She had called up her high school batchmates at South Bacoor College in Pasay City and invited them to join a relief mission.

"Back in Hong Kong, we really take the effort to pool resources and send them to calamity victims in the Philippines. How much more now that I am actually here?" she said.

Amy Ng, one of her school friends, suggested channeling the donations through the Serve the People Corps, the socialistic arm of the militant Bagong Alyansang Makabayan, which has been doing relief operations for flood victims in the Calabarzon (Cavite, Laguna, Batangas, Rizal, Quezon). Ng's son, Nathaniel, happens to be the group's coordinator.

"Because of my condition, Amy insisted that we let Ana's group do the repacking and distribution. But I told her I really wanted to do it myself and be part of it," Hernandez said.

Two more friends came over and they spent the entire evening repacking the rice, biscuits and canned goods at Hernandez's house. Unfortunately, during the actual relief distribution, she had to beg off as the pain shot up again.

Kindness, hope

Her predicament didn't stop Hernandez from showing kindness to others, a trait she believes is inherent even among other OFWs in Hong Kong. "When you see OFWs meet, you hear them talk and even ask about their day's need. It turns out, they don't even know each other," she said.

"When calamity strikes the Philippines," she said, the OFWs "will shell out even $10 out of their pocket just so to send help back here."

Hernandez said that living in Hong Kong did not diminish their desire to help their countrymen. "It doesn't matter we cannot help everybody or we don't know or are not related to us," she said.

She is now back in Hong Kong, where she continues to work and seek treatment. "I am strong," she said. Her message to the same to the victims of calamity: "This storm, too, shall pass."

JOCELYN Hernandez (center) packs relief goods in her house in Bacoor City in Cavite, briefly setting aside her own battle against a kidney abnormality.

Runners launch 'Takbundukan' to save mountains

SOME 30 runners led by activist priest Robert Reyes staged "Takbundukan" around Mt. Banahaw on Friday and over the weekend as part of the Department of Environment and Natural Resources' (DENR) program to save the country's mountains and the environment.

"We conduct this activity to stress the importance of saving our natural resources. The mountains, rivers that inundated Metro Manila and other provinces do not merely remind us of [Tropical Storm] 'Gener.' It reminds us that something drastic and immediate has to be done to save our mountains," Reyes said by phone on Saturday.

According to Soliel Vargas, park superintendent for Banahaw and the Mt. San Cristobal Protected Landscape, the project promotes the national greening program with emphasis on watershed protection and proper solid waste management.

Most parts of the 2,177-meter Banahaw, which spans 11,133 hectares, remain restricted to the public as the mountain recovers from decades of environmental degradation.

Reyes, popularly known as the "running priest," is known for bolstering marathons to raise public awareness about social and political issues.

Takbundukan kicked off in Pagsanjan town in Laguna and stopped for the night in Liliw town. The next day, it resumed its run up to San Pablo City, also in Laguna. On Sunday, Reyes and other runners from the DENR and nongovernment groups, ran from San Pablo to Dolores town, the gateway to Banahaw in Quezon.

After a brief stopover, they headed for Sariaya, another town known for quarry operations at the foot of the mountain.

"Actually, the activity was not all running. If the distance is too far, the runners rode in vehicles and only started the run a few kilometers to the target destination," Reyes explained.

Reyes and they distributed narrating signs (tarpaulin), seedlings of native trees and the "Kartilya ng Kalikasan" to local officials during stopovers. The Kartilya contains words of wisdom to create awareness about discipline among Filipinos.

"But deeper than the lack of discipline is the alienation from nature that manifests in self-interest and lack of love, concern and care for the earth. Wrong belief systems, attitudes and bad habits need to be recognized and transformed. More than proper trash disposal and limiting consumerism," he said.

The runs are symbols of three virtues—sacrifice and commitment, shepherding and stewardship, and discipline, he added.

"The runners' stress are also an extension of an openness and readiness to save our mountains by planting more and more trees," Reyes said. Delfin T. Mallari Jr.

Promising "more fun the fourth time around," the Chamber of Automotive Manufacturers of the Philippines, Inc. (CAMPI), the country's premier organization of vehicle manufacturers and assemblers, is again treating the motoring public with dazzling exhibition of concept or prototype vehicles and the latest advancements in automotive technology.

This year's theme, "Drive the Fun," is in support of the Department of Tourism's "It's More Fun in the Philippines" campaign and embodies CAMPI's aspiration for the PIMS to become a must-see attraction as one of the top motoring events in the region.

Optimism among the 13 CAMPI members and affiliates is riding high on the back of the auto industry's strong performance in sales in the past months. "This is a clear sign that the industry is on the road to recovery and is achieving its targets in the industry road map," said [illegible], CAMPI president and also vice president at Toyota Motor Philippines Corporation.

'Drive the fun' for the whole family at CAMPI's Aug. 16-19 motor show

Driving more fun at the PIMS are the following exciting event features:

PIMS Drive the Fun Adventure Rally and Golf Cart Challenge (Aug. 18-19)

This is a fun rally that features participating auto brands driving to various points of interest within Metro Manila, starting on Aug. 18 at the PIMS venue, the World Trade Center in Pasay City, up to event co-sponsor Thunderbird Resorts, and back on Aug. 19 for the awarding ceremony. One of its special stages is the "Golf Cart Challenge" which involves a surprise obstacle course that is sure to make the audience shout with laughter.

Test Drives

Every PIMS will not be complete without a test drive area. The show provides car shoppers with a unique opportunity to test drive new makes and models from all participating brands under one roof.

Special Auto Financing Promo

As a platinum sponsor of the PIMS, BDO Unibank, the country's largest bank, will provide a special auto financing package with low interest rates and easy payment terms for PIMS visitors.

Seminars, workshops and demonstrations

Have fun learning from PIMS exhibitors and the CAMPI Technical Committee which will mount various seminars, workshops and demonstrations. Watch the video show and attend the seminar on car detailing by Meguiar's Philippines. There will also be high-impact exhibit presentations by the participating brands — always a must-see in every PIMS.

Automotive Designers' Row

This is a photo exhibit of the biography of automotive designers of the participating brands to showcase the geniuses behind some of the iconic and successful designs in the auto industry.

Automobilia and Heritage Display

This is an exhibit of various auto and car collectibles, including a die-cast display by the Die Cast Collectors of the Philippines.

Car Club Meets

Every PIMS, members of various CAMPI-affiliated car clubs gather for their grand eyeball meets and other club activities. This is the best time to get to know the car club and join their fun-filled activities.

Automotive Services

PIMS ticket holders can avail of special discounts for car wash by Autobot Pabo and Bodyworks and for car tinting by Wintergates.

> 'Visitors going to the PIMS venue at the World Trade Center Metro Manila can take the fun party bus rides, courtesy of Starbright Bodykits'

Drive the Fun Kiddie Treasure Hunt

Open to kids aged 6 to 12 years old, this fun activity involves an interactive trivia game that will challenge the future car enthusiasts. Exciting prizes await the participants.

Fun Bounce Inflatable

A special entertainment activity for toddlers, children, and the young at heart.

Fun Party Bus Rides

Visitors going to the PIMS venue at the World Trade Center Metro Manila can take the fun party bus rides, courtesy of Starbright Bodykits. This free shuttle bus service will come from the Rizal [illegible] Complex on [illegible] Marcapagal Avenue, Manila.

Fun Food Trucks

Car lovers can have never been hungrier or more fun to try. The PIMS will have a "Drive the Fun at Home" area where visitors can have a taste of the food catered by Chefs' Quarters Group of Foodservice Groups [illegible] and buy them from a food truck provided by Amy Customs. Experience a unique and festive approach to trade show outdoor dining.

2012 CAMPI Motor Show Media Awards

All members of the mainstream and social media also get a chance to win trophies and cash prizes for "Best Motor Show Coverage" in any of the 12 categories at the 2012 CAMPI Motor Show Media Awards by covering the event and spreading the fun with the motoring public.

BMW GROUP DOMINATES 2012 AUTOMOTIVE BRAND CONTEST

48 OF THE COVETED PRIZES GO TO PROJECTS BY THE BMW GROUP, 14 OF THEM TO BMW GROUP DESIGN.

The BMW Group garnered 48 awards at the Automotive Brand Contest, a prestigious international design competition of the German Design Council.

BMW Group Design was named a winner 11 times. The BMW i8 Concept Spyder, BMW 6 Series Gran Coupé, and the motorcycle model BMW S 1000 RR won in the Exterior category. Among the winners in the Interior category were the BMW i8 Concept Spyder, BMW 6 Series Gran Coupé, and BMW 3 Series Sedan. In addition, the BMW Group Design Team received an award in the special Team of the Year category. The BMW i8 Concept took a prize in the Innovation of the Year category, while several BMW brand campaigns were also honored.

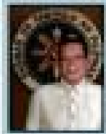

The Automotive Brand Contest is the only neutral international design competition for car marques and, since its inception in 2011, has evolved into an important event for the sector. This year, for the second time, the German Design Council recognized outstanding product and communication design and turned its attention to the essential significance of a brand and its design within the motoring industry. An independent panel of experts including representatives from the media, design and brand communication, as well as from higher education establishments, judged the submitted works in a total of 12 competitive categories. Prize-winners are automatically nominated for the Design Award of the Federal Republic of Germany, also presented by the Design Council.

Last year, BMW Group Design took awards in the Automotive Brand Contest for its SEOT-DESIGNO light installation, the BMW 328 Hommage, and the BMW 6 Series Coupé.

BMW is exclusively distributed in the Philippines by Asian Carmakers Corporation.

My warmest greetings to the Chamber of Automotive Manufacturers of the Philippines, as you hold the 4th Philippine International Motor Show.

Cars have gone a long way since their beginnings in the 19th century, and their transformation from clear, simple machines into today's complex engineering marvels is a testament to how far we have gone in the field of science and technology. [illegible]

Greetings to the men and women of the Chamber of Automotive Manufacturers of the Philippines, Incorporated!

In behalf of the City Government of Pasay, I extend my fervent congratulations to the organizers, participants, and those behind the success of the 4th CAMPI Philippine International Motor Show. We are honored to collaborate with CAMPI in staging this event showcasing the best and the latest concept cars, fuel-efficient and environmental friendly cars, SUVs, and commercial vehicles from local auto manufacturers and distributors.

I congratulate your organization for strengthening the local automotive industry. Moreover, I appreciate CAMPI in encouraging our own automotive enthusiasts to build more efficient and economical automobiles without putting our environment at risk. May you remain steadfast in your commitment to excellence not only in nation-building, but also in saving our Mother Nature.

With your vision as a socially responsible automotive industry association, in partnership with the Philippine government and other stakeholders, together let us join forces to continuously work on and attain the noble objective in developing a feasible and self-sustaining local automotive industry.

Like a well-fueled car, let us all be the vehicle to go further, move forward and drive towards success!

Congratulations once again and mabuhay!

ANTONINO G. CALIXTO
Mayor
City of Pasay

The Chamber of Automotive Manufacturers of the Philippines, Inc. (CAMPI) marks another milestone with the staging of the 4th Philippine International Motor Show (PIMS) at the World Trade Center on August 16-19, 2012.

We see this as a most opportune time to hold an international motor show given the global attention on the Philippines as an emerging tiger economy. Beyond providing consumers with global quality, environment-friendly and state-of-the-art vehicles, the 4th PIMS also serves as a showcase of the best of the Philippine motor vehicle development industry – which is a significant generator of investments, employment, livelihood opportunities, exports and government revenues, while promoting upstream and downstream linkages, technology transfer, manpower skills development, environmental protection, road safety and the deepening of the awareness of local engineering industries. As local manufacturing of vehicles continues, it evolves and transforms at accelerating speed, with the government's strong support, the Philippine automotive industry can enhance its competitiveness to continue to manifest its flexibility and adaptability in responding to the many emerging global challenges it faces.

Since we started mounting the PIMS in 2007, we have drawn nearly 300,000 motoring enthusiasts and visitors. In just a few more years, CAMPI believes that the PIMS will also become one of the Philippines' top motor shows.

It is CAMPI's dream to bring the PIMS to the league of world-class auto shows. We have chosen "DRIVE THE FUN" as this year's theme, in support of the Department of Tourism's "It's More Fun in the Philippines" campaign. Together at the 4th PIMS, we invite you to DRIVE THE FUN!

14,747 meals and 3,710 relief packages, mostly from youth volunteers–'bayanihan' is alive

By Margaux Salcedo

LAST WEEK'S floods, which left over 60 dead and some 384,000 people in evacuation centers, became our collective trauma.

But through the dark clouds shone the sun that came in the form of the bayanihan spirit that proved even stronger and mightier than in the time of Tropical Storm "Ondoy." Relief operations surged everywhere, from the Red Cross to church communities and even school barkadas.

Student initiative

One of the notable efforts came from Enderun Colleges in Bonifacio Global City with an internationally competitive culinary school.

You would think that students who can afford to pay P300,000 a semester to learn to cook would rather stay safely at home and enjoy the class suspensions. Instead, they were at the forefront of efforts to help the evacuees.
